- Medical Examination
- Chest X-ray Examination

- Serum Creatinine and Estimated Glomerular Filtration Rate (eGFR)

You need to provide this letter to the clinic where you go to complete your Australian immigration health examinations.

Additional health examinations may be required based on the results of your initial health examinations. In some cases our eMedical system will generate additional examinations in order to streamline the health process where possible.

If a health examination is listed as 'Completed' this means that there is an existing examination that can be re-used for this visa application. More information about when we allow you to use examinations again is available on our website immi.homeaffairs.gov.au/help-support/meeting-our-requirements/health/arrange-your-health-examinations

If you have additional examinations that can be used again, contact us through ImmiAccount before you attend your appointment.

If you have not yet completed the required health examinations: Make arrangements to undergo these examinations as soon as possible as outlined above so that your health results can be assessed and processing can continue.

If you believe you have already completed the required health examinations at an eMedical clinic: Follow the instructions available on our website immi.homeaffairs.gov.au/help-support/meeting-our-requirements/health/after-your-health-examinations to check that the clinic has submitted your health results and follow up with them immediately if necessary.

Use HAP ID mentioned in the application summary to book an appointment to undergo your health examinations. The information provided below will explain how to find a clinic, how to book an appointment and what you need to take to your appointment.
